

STAHL'S SUICIDE MOST MYSTERIOUS; FRIENDS PUZZLED

Ball Player's Wife Cried
"I Could Have Saved
ed Him."

Happily Married, Well
Paid, Life Apparently Perfect.

Some Secret Trouble,
Friends Believe, Drove Him to Death.

BOSTON, Mass., March 29.—"Chick" Stahl, captain and former manager of the Boston American League baseball team, has left an unsolved mystery in his sudden suicide. Today his stricken wife is speeding toward West End, where his body is lying, with this cry on her lips:

"I could have saved him if I had been there."

One question is on the tongue of the entire baseball world today. "Why did Stahl take his own life?" In the opinion of many of those closest to the dead ball player, something more than worry over baseball must have driven him to his death.

"If I had gone with him," said Mrs. Stahl, "this would never have happened. Oh, Chick! You wanted me to go with you," she cried despairingly. "But I thought it would be better for me to stay here in Boston and wait for you. If I had only been with you those nights when you were tossing about sleeplessly with wide open eyes. Then you would have had somebody to confide in. Oh, Chick, you worry over little things, things nobody else would have bothered about. It is all my fault—all my fault. I ought to have been with you, but it is too late now—too late."

Brooded on Secret Trouble.
For some time Stahl had been brooding over some secret trouble, declare his friends, and now they ask "What was it?"

He had never, so far as is known, shown any signs of insanity. He had reached the height of baseball fame, his home life was apparently happy, but these facts only deepen the mystery of the tragedy. There is a belief that Stahl had long since dwelt on the problem of ending his life, else why did he continually talk about it to the members of the team? And the question is unanswered.

At Louisville Stahl said to Dineen one morning while rubbing himself with a solution of carbolic acid, "I wonder if this stuff would kill a man."

"Would it?" responded Dineen. "Why, a spoonful would kill a dozen men."

"Then I have a good mind to take a good drink of it," continued Stahl. Dineen looked at him and said: "How would your mother or your wife like that kind of news?"

Chick shook his head and answered: "That's so, Bill, it would kill my mother."

Although not a man who often talked religion, Stahl brought up the subject again and again in Little Rock and went to holy communion while there. Stahl's friends admit that it was only a matter of time before his responsibility would have worried some, but Stahl was too sensible and level-headed, they say, to let that drive him to death.

Life Apparently Happy.
Moreover, he had on Monday last been relieved of the greater part of his responsibilities and everything seemed to be running along smoothly.

The members of the Boston team were with him to a man. The owner of the club had implicit faith in him and his ability to handle a great ball team. He had a big salary, was lately paid to a bright Boston girl and apparently was at peace with all the world.

The fact that Stahl had ordered his fellow-players to practice, had donned his own uniform, and, apparently, fully intended to join them up to the very moment he put the bottle of deadly acid to his lips, only deepens the mystery.

"What thought came into his mind that finally overcame his resistance to the impulse that had seemingly long been calling to him to end his life?" is the question his friends are asking today.

And no one can answer.

APRIL 12TH FINAL DATE FOR TAKING NEW PHOTOS

her photograph appealed to the artists who judged the 600 beauties before them. Another announcement which all the people interested in the contest will do well to remember is the following:

Free Pictures Until April 12.
So great has been the demand of women to have new photographs taken by the leading photographers of the city under an arrangement made with the art galleries by The Sunday Times, that the photographers hereby give notice that these photographs can be taken only until and including Friday, April 12. The contest runs until April 21, but the photographers want the time intervening between April 12 and April 21 to finish up the immense number of photographs taken so that all may be entered in the contest prior to April 21.

This arrangement has proven extremely satisfactory to both the contestants, and The Sunday Times. The beauties are assured that the photographs will be perfect, and The Sunday Times is assured that it will get the newest and freshest likenesses of those entered in this way. All who are dissatisfied with the photographs they have taken can have new ones taken by applying to The Sunday Times for an order for photographs at practically any of the prominent photograph studios in this city.

When the Beauty Editor entered his office this morning, he found on his desk fifteen letters, some signed and some anonymous, referring him to localities or to specific addresses where beauties are to be found. Back of each of these letters there was clearly only the greatest interest in the final success of this beauty quest, and the greatest desire that Washington should put forward such a beauty as will win the national prize from all the other cities in the United States.

Times Will Search for Beauties.
Acting on these suggestions in the letters, the Beauty Editor has employed an assistant who will do the best he can to go to each of the places designated to search out the beauties mentioned. But his efforts can not possibly cover all the places given. Such letters come in every mail every day, and to hunt out or communicate with all the addresses submitted would be too great a task.

Consequently, The Sunday Times asks that those making the suggestions about where the beauties are to be found come to the aid of the quest and do all in their power to secure the photographs which they glory in the eventuate in greater glory for the beauty which the people of the District have given in the search for the city's beauty has been more than was ever expected. It has exceeded the cooperation given in any other city.

In the national contest with beauties selected from groups of four States and from cities of the size of Chicago and New York. What is lacking in the contest is that it must make up in quality. To do this with certainty, The Sunday Times must have the photograph of every pretty woman in the District.

Such a result can only follow the determination in the minds of everybody to send in the photographs of all the lovely women possible.

Lovelier Than Miss Carson.
The Sunday Times claims with confidence that the winner of the first weekly contest, Miss Mae Buckler, is indisputably lovelier than Della Carson, who has been declared the prize beauty of Chicago. If there are any women here more beautiful than Miss Buckler, The Sunday Times wants their photographs.

Answering queries that continue to come in about the awards, the following information is again quoted:
To the sender of the woman declared the most beautiful of all in the final award, $100 will be given; and to the sender of the photograph of each weekly winner, $25 will be given.

To the final winner of the verdict, "Most beautiful," will be given:
A gold watch by R. Harris & Co., an evening wrap by S. Kann, Sons & Co., and a dozen $25 photographs by the Towles studio.

MASONIC FUNERAL FOR J. C. LEONARD

James C. Leonard, president of the Retail Liquor Dealers' Association of the District of Columbia, died last night at Providence Hospital after a short illness. He was sixty years of age. He leaves a wife and six children. Mr. Leonard's home was in Anacostia, D. C.

Mr. Leonard was one of the prominent citizens of Anacostia and was always a leading factor in securing improvements for the town. He was treasurer of the Uniontown Building and Loan Association and also of the Anacostia Citizens' Association.

As a member of the Business Men's Association Mr. Leonard did some splendid work, and his death will be a great loss to the association. He was prominent in Grand Army circles and in Masonic circles. He served through the civil war.

Under the administrations of Presidents Harrison and Cleveland Mr. Leonard was United States Government Inspector of Fuel for the District.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Masons at Mr. Leonard's home, 11 Fillmore street, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

POLICE
Red Blood Corpscles Made by Good Food are the Police of the Body.

When a man keeps good red blood in his veins he has a sort of police squad and is practically immune from disease. Pure blood made from the right food will resist the attacks of disease germs and drive them out or kill them. The first thing that should be looked to, therefore, is the blood, and prompt action to build up the red corpuscles by food. A lawyer in a Western town tells how he drove Bright's disease out of his system by supplying good red blood in food.

"For several years I had been afflicted with kidney trouble," he says, "which sometimes incapacitated me for business. My condition became such as to cause great fears that Bright's Disease was about to fasten itself upon me."

"I had always been very fond of coffee. When, however, the kidney symptoms became so alarming, I quit the coffee, and began to use Postum Food Coffee. I soon became as fond of the new beverage as I had been of the old coffee, and, what is more important, my health improved rapidly and steadily until a short time, the kidney troubles had almost entirely disappeared. I am convinced that my former sufferings and the symptoms of Bright's disease were caused by the use of coffee, and that the credit for my cure belongs to the Postum. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich."

Postum Food Coffee and Grape-Nuts make good red blood. They contain food that Nature uses in the process, so prepared as to be quickly assimilated. There's a Reason.

POSTAL CONVENTION TO BE DISCUSSED

Indications that the representatives of the United States and Canadian Governments, now in conference here in regard to Canada's wish to withdraw from the postal convention as it affects second-class matter, will arrive at a satisfactory settlement of the points in dispute are said to be bright today.

It is even possible that a decision in the matter may be reached late this afternoon.

The Canadian representatives—Postmaster General Lemieux, Deputy Postmaster General R. M. Coulter, and Mr. Smith, of the Canadian department of posts—went to Mt. Vernon this morning and will go to Fort Myer early this afternoon.

Later they will meet Postmaster General Meyer, Second Assistant Postmaster General McCleary, and other officials of the department, and from this meeting it is thought a satisfactory settlement will come.
